

* 食欲の秋/味覚の秋 - It is said that fall is the season when ingredients are the most abundant and appetizing, so the pleasure of eating is generally associated to it

I was thinking
of buying
this one...

It looks
good!
Yeah!

Yeah.

so they wear slender
clothing,
but slender
clothing
highlights
their big head!

Japanese
people have long
torsos
and short
legs,

The Jacket
itself
looks great!

The MA-1
is not bad!

So
it's my fault!!!

PERFECT!!

You
should've
said this before I bought it...

Stop it,
you're
bringing me down...

You're unbelievable!

You just need
something to achieve
full-body
balance.

It's still too early
to be depressed.

98/10

With this, you can pass through the cold season with
no problems.

Outerwear is much more
expensive
than any other type of clothing
so it takes a bit of courage
when deciding to buy one.

And anything over 15,000 is a definite
"no"!!

I'm glad you still think like a student.

Tomoki, how much for an outerwear do
you think is too expensive?

About
10,000
yen I guess...?

MB's Note

#11

The 3 necks to unite them all

In this chapter, after seeing her brother Yūsuke worry about looking good in the MA-1, Tamaki recommended for him a "Visual-effect Stole." And this made me want to add a really important footnote to this story.

So to begin, your neck, wrist and ankle are called your "3 necks"*. They are 3 focal points, where you can easily draw the gaze of onlookers. By controlling your appearance of these 3 focal points, you can influence the impression others will have on your appearance.

If you've been walking round the city lately, you might've noticed that people of many ages or genders have been rolling up their pants, which reveals their ankles. Exposing the most slender part of your leg - the ankle - gives off a neat and slender impression when coupled with the straight, slim silhouette of the pant itself. "Can just simply rolling up my pants post my ankles really give off a neater and more slender impression?" You may feel doubtful, but this is the power of the "3 necks." Try it in front of a mirror for yourself and see the difference. You might just change your mind.

Now that we've addressed that, let's get back to talking about the MA-1 and the stole. If you take a look at the shape of the MA-1, you'll notice that the collar is low lying, like a parka. And just showing only one neck and not the other two of the "3 necks" will make the look a bit unbalanced and unspeaking. This is why suit jackets, which also have a low lying collar, are matched with white colored shirts. You can simply cover your neck by pairing it with shirts with tall collars. The MA-1 bomber jacket can easily look great paired with a high-collared shirt, but since Yūsuke was in an extravagant mood, today I recommend a reasonably priced stole. Footnote over!

*Japanese call the wrist "hand neck" and the ankle "leg neck."

A
pretzel
roll

/a/nonymous presents:

Fuku wo Kuru nara Kon na Fui ni
(If You're Gonna Dress Up, Do It Like This)

Translator:
Winstonite

Proofreader:
Persephone

Editor:
Aranea